Promoting Student Attendance

Attendance Policy & Procedure for the Management of Attendance Data

Overview

Flemington Primary School endeavours to promote a culture of attendance, where all students are encouraged to attend school at all possible times and at the correct time, ready to start school, with the exception of illness. All staff will work collaboratively towards establishing effective management of student absence data, so as to monitor and support students' and families' educational, social and emotional development and achieve positive outcomes for all children.

The management of attendance at Flemington Primary School reflects government initiatives regarding attendance and uses tools and guidelines (such as those provided through CASES 21) in their management of attendance data. A culture of attendance is to be encouraged within the school community through positive communication and with an emphasis on engaging all those within the school community in the culture of the school.

Using the "It's Not Okay to be Away" program, the school seeks to establish links within the school community via the Principal or Assistant Principal to support identified "at risk" students.

Principles

- Student absences, as well as late and early arrivals to school and the monitoring of attendance data is a shared responsibility between classroom teachers, specialist teachers, administrative staff and parents.
- Effective communication between classroom teachers, specialist teachers, administrative staff, members of the Welfare Committee and parents is encouraged so as to ensure that student absences are managed effectively.
- All individuals within the school environment are to be encouraged to be involved in the wider school community so as to establish a network of support for those in need.
- A culture of acceptance is to be encouraged where all individuals within the school community are to be valued and respected for their individual differences.
